A medical emergency is an injury or illness that is acute and poses an immediate risk to a person's life or long term health. Emergency health services in Ireland provide medical attention for illnesses or injuries requiring immediate treatment. Typical examples of injuries that may require emergency health services include those resulting from accidents, heart attacks or other sudden illnesses. Emergency health services are usually delivered by a general practitioner (GP), ambulance personnel or by attendance at the Accident and Emergency department of an acute hospital (Citizens Information).
